Belle A. Fanton, the ideal matron of the Home, cheery, bustling, lovable and loved by all the old people confided to her care, introduced The Evening World reporter to the oldest living immate, Aunty Bowler.

Aunty Bowler is a dear, cheerful little woman, wrinkled with age and wreathed in kindly smiles. She arose from an easy chair in her own cosy and bright white-walled room and trotted nimbly across the floor to take the hand of the scribe.

She looked him all over with a look that flattered him and then chirruped.

"Bless you, young man! May all your efforts be successful. But," and the good little wrinkled hand gave a new pressure on that of the reporter, "don't forget the main thing. Try and get into heaven! I want to meet you there."

The reporter told her that yesterday he had been to Brookiyn to congratulate Major Thomas Harward on his 190th birthday.

"Humph!" ejaculated Aunty Bowler, a little contemptuously. "I ain't near so old as that. I'm only ninety-four."

The Home seems to be a good place to live in, for some years ago an inmate died at the age of 117 years.

Every Word Was Legible. [From the Altoona (Pa.) Times.]

THE EVENING WORLD of Tuesday astonished the world by printing on its first page fac-similes of its issues dated March 12, 13, 14 and 15, the blizzard quartet of 1888. Every word was legible, and the pictures as suggestive now as then. This feat was accomplished by a process known as photo-electrotyping. As an evidence of what can be done in the hurried endesvorings of a daily newspaper by this process. the first page of THE EVENING WORLD is simply perfect. The plates are produced n micro-scopic form, the process of which has heretefore been described in the Times. A photo-negative is first taken in reduced size. From the negative a print is produced on a bichromatized gelatine plate, which is afterwards brushed or coated with graphite and then submitted to the electrotype process, which has now reached a wonderful degree of perfection.

Trouble Over Cemetery Deeds. L BONARD—All persons whose deeds were left with the late William Leonard, Sorico and Undertaker, may receive same by applying to his encelessor, burn Leonard, 130 Greenwich ave., opposite Jackson Square.

There are about four or five hundred of these deeds. They are for 'ots in cemeteries in this city. Some were left in William Leonard's care years ago, and the owners have left New York. Others were held by the undertaker for money

Others were beld by the undertaker for money due on them.

Owen Leonard, the successor of his brother William, is having considerable trouble with people who owe money on their lots. They want the deeds, but do not want to pay what is due on them, he says.

The estate of William Leonard must be settled up, and Owen Leonard refuses to give up the deeds until the amounts due are paid. Hence the advertisement.

THIS GOOD OLD LADY WAS 102 BADLY LEFT ON BUYING LOTS

MENTS TO ROBERT WILSON.

When They Wanted to Fence Thom In The Found the Lots Didn't Belong to Wilson at All-They Had Paid $537 in Weekly Mites-New Wilson Is in Jail and Says He Was Cheated, Too.

Robert Wilson, a real estate agent, of 241 East Seventy-fourth street, charged with swindling Kate Deunon, of 111 Sheffield street, Newark, and Rose Wignaw, of 17 Rivington street, by means of false representations regarding lots he sold them in Newark, gazed sadly out between the bars of a cell in the Essex Market Prison this morning.

"This all comes through dealing with vomen," he exclaimed to an Evening WORLD reporter.

The women in their affidavits say that Wilson advertised lots for sale on Pashina avenue, Newark, the property of Francis S. | first. Pashina. They called on him and made a bargain and for two years past they have been paying instalments on one lot each. Rosa had invested $350 and Kate $187. They say they recently went to visit their property and were informed by Mr. Pashina that Wilson had no right to sell, and that their claims were worthless. Wilson told THE EVENING WORLD young nan that he had a perfect right to sell the property and had in his possession an agreement and deeds for 130 lots on Pashina ave-He makes it appear that Pashina was the executor of his father's estate, and says Pashina gave him the right of all.

The lots brought from $200 to $400, Pashina receiving half of the money, and Wilson says he grew anxious for the rights of his customers.

When he spoke to Pashina he claims that the latter said. Well, I will give you deeds for 130 lots and thus save your customers for 130 lots and thus save your customers from any losses."

This was done, Wilson says, and he (Wilson) gave a mortgage for $30,0.0, payable in 1891. This mortgage was for the full value of the lots, notwithsfanding Pashina was only to receive $15,000 as his share. This was understood by verbal agreement. Interest was made payable half yearly, but it was also understood, Wilson claims, that more was to be paid. All this happened in 1885.

When the squal-bling over the estate ceased, Pashina's sister came into possession of the 130 lots, and repudiated the contracts made by the executor. She held Wilson on his mortgages for the full amount and foreclosed. Wilson claims that she had no right to do this, and he went right on collecting instalments, as if nothing had happened, sheltering himself behind the Two-Year Redemption law in New Jorsey.

demotion law in New Jersey.

Wilson claims that everything is all right, but the foreelosure of the morigages and the repudiation of his sales by Mr. Pashina seem to make everything all wrong.

He is held in $1,000 bail for examination

After running about one hundred feet they came to a vacant lot. Several people were standing on the sidewalk peering through the darkness at a man who held a shining revolver in his right hand. A stream of blood trickled from his forehead. O'Sullivan ran up to the man and ordered him to give up the pistol. The man refused to do so, but after quite a struggle, the policeman succeeded in quite a struggle, the policeman succeeded in disarming him.

Meanwhile, Officer Keogh saw a man eacaping in the direction of the rear of the lot. He gave chase and caught his man as he was going over the fence. It was Brennan.

"What made you shoot that man?" asked O'Sullivan of the man who held the pistol and who proved to be Dugan.

"I'm the man that's shot," he answered as he pointed to the mark on his forehead. "It was only a drunken row," he added indifferently.

On the way to the station-house Dugan said that his wounds didn't amount to anything. "I've got a nasty one in the stomach, though," he said.

Before he had gone many steps, however, he weakened, and the policemen had to support him. As he reached the station-house steps he said in a gasping tone: "Oh! I guess I'm done for now."

He was carried inside, and an ambulance was summoned from Chambers Street Hospital. The surgeon discovered that Dugan had two wounds in his abdomen. The injury to his head was caused by a brick.

After his wounds were dressed, a priest was sent for, who administered the sacrament to the injured man.

When the Court resumed proceedings at 2 o'clock yesterday Nichols's place was vacant.

Messengers were sent scurrying in all directions for the absentee, but the search was vain, until somebody suggested that he was probably at the police station indulging in his favorite pastime of domino-playing.

Sure enough, a telephone call to Police Headquarters brought the tidings that Nichols was there. He had forgotten all about his own relations to the case, although he had been engaged in talking about the trial for nearly half an hour with a police officer.

Mr. Nichols was very sheepish when he arrived in the court-room three-quarters of an hour late. Judge Torrance was forbearing and did not reprimand the delinquent.

Hundreds of imitations—dangerous to fabric and hands—are tugging away at the props, which have put and still hold Pyle's Pearline in its present enviable position. It's the standardpure-effective-harmless-a necessity in millions of homes. These imitators take names ending in INE-to deceivepeddle their goods from house to house-claim them to be 'Pearline"-"same as Pearline," or "good as Pearline." Beware of them-one wash may ruin your clothes. Their methods alone should denounce them—evidently they do—for the consumption of Pearline increases each day. The opening scene was the entrance to the Park Row side of the Post-Office, and the dramatis persone were pedestrians, newsboys, bootblacks, peddlers, fakirs and others.

The scene opened with one newsboy proposing to another that they play "craps." Three or four others agreed with alacrity, and they adjourned to the comfortable nook formed by the door entrance.

There were probably fifteen boys and men watching the game. The stakes were high. and so intensely interested were the spectators that they did not hear the window open An Evening World reporter did and, as he a colored boy was making his last play for a big pot.

"Got'em," he yelled, as the dice turned up right. The crowd was excited. The man upstairs softly lifted his bucket and, with a sudden turn of the wrist, dumped its hot contents upon the crowd below.

It struck fairly in the middle of the crowd, thoroughly drenching every one. The man with the bucket disappeared, and the boys scattered muttering vengeance:

At first all was quiet. The drenched gam blers, with arder, however, undampened, gathered together again. They held a consultation. By some mysterious process they secured four umbrellas and confidently took cossession of door number two, where it was dry.

The umbrellas were hoisted and everything for a while went smoothly. The excitement in the game increased and the umbrellas were forgotten and laid aside. Again the same man appeared with his bucket of hot water, and for the second time a drenching was administered and again the boys scattered.

Their gambling place was wet and the game was broken up. Each blamed the other of not keeping the umbrellas up. Then they scattered disgusted with the mean persecutions of humanity.

Verily, the ways of infantile gamblers in this town are wet and rugged.

AN ASPIRANT FOR TURKEY.

William A. Gans Hopes Harrison Will Let Him Succeed Minister Straus.

New York is in a position to fill about all of the Federal offices in the gift of President Harrison. The Republican organization of this city has candidates for most of the fat diplomatic and consular berths.

Of course many of these must be disap pointed, but Lawyer William A. Gans, of 291 Broadway, thinks his chances of being one of the chosen few to be very good. Mr. Gans wants to succeed Oscar S. Straus, of this city, as Minister to Turkey, This position has been held by New York men dursing Mr. Cleveland's administration, Mr. Straus succeeding Congressman S. S. Cox.

Lawyer Gans is one of the leading Republicans of the Twentieth Assembly District, which he has represented in the County Committee for ten years past. He is a well-known writer on economic subjects, and besides his work on the stump in the last campaign furnished the Republican National Committee with a great deal of statistical information in the nature of a comparison of the savings-bank accumulations in American and European countries.

Mr. Gans's aspirations for diplomatic honors are said to be looked upon with favor by Secretary Blane. Should he be selected he will represent the same element of the German population which was recognized by Presiden' Cleveland in the choice of the present Minister, Mr. Straus. ing Mr. Cleveland's administration, Mr.
